

Meagen Brooks was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania in 1985. At a young age Brooks spent time with a childhood friend in the historical Glenshaw House, where the original glass blown windows first sparked her obsession with glass and fire. Brooks works predominantly as a neon artist and welder and often incorporates acrylic painting, ink etching and photography into her works. After having completed her BS in Cinema and Photography at Ithaca College she moved to Los Angeles to pursue her artistic endeavors in both the art and film worlds. She has been nominated for two Art Director's Guild Awards for graphic design in television and has had collaborative shows at Lakich Studios downtown M&N, Gallery 800 and Linus Gallery in Pasadena. Brooks lives and works in Los Angeles.
